ENDLESS SUMMER ARTS..... TODAY-THURSDAY

Summer officially begins on Monday, but the Lancaster Summer Arts Festival is already in full swing. This week the Steinman Park Series will host acoustic performer Maria Wilson at noon today, as well as The Blind Willies, a new jazz group, at noon on Tuesday. The Jazz Series continues that evening in Steinman Park with a 7 to 10 p.m. performance by the Amy Banks Trio. If you're looking for something to do with kids who are already bored... Check out more jazz as the Reese Project introduces kids to some really cool tunes on Monday at 10:30 a.m. Barbie Holder will enchant youngsters with her guitar and hammered dulcimer playing on Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. Both Children's Series performances take place at the YWCA, 110 N. Lime St. "Walk the Line," the film biography of the late Johnny Cash, is this week's LSAF Film Series presentation at 8 p.m. Monday in Steinman Park. And finally, the festival hosts a couple of special events, including a performance by the Community African Dance Group on Wednesday at 3 p.m. at the Bright Side Opportunities Center, 515 Hershey Ave., and a concert by Voices of Cecilia, a women's chorus, on Thursday at 7 p.m. on the portico at the back of the Lancaster Museum of Art, 135 N. Lime. And guess what. It's all free!!
